FIRST / COUNT IT ALL

Map your income

Record income from every source, not just the forms you receive.

Money coming in

- [ ] All 2026 Forms 1099-NEC, 1099-MISC, and 1099-K, if received.
- [ ] Invoices, booking records, receipts, and client payment statements.
- [ ] Cash, check, transfer, and direct payment records.
- [ ] Payment app, card processor, and marketplace reports.
- [ ] Records of tips and other service earnings, if applicable.
- [ ] Returns, discounts, refunds, and chargebacks with supporting details.
- [ ] Any barter/noncash compensation or unusual receipts to discuss.

Check against your records

- [ ] W-2s from regular jobs you held in addition to your side work.
- [ ] Separate summaries for each income source or platform.
- [ ] Bank deposit reports, with personal transfers identified separately.
- [ ] Payment processing fees, commissions, and platform charges.
- [ ] Any corrected Forms 1099 and communication about errors.
- [ ] Notes about income reported on more than one payment statement.
- [ ] Estimated federal/state tax payment confirmations, if made.

REMEMBER

You may need to report taxable business income even if no Form 1099 arrives. A Form 1099-K usually reports gross payments, so use your underlying records to distinguish sales, refunds, fees, and any overlapping statements.

SECOND / BACK UP YOUR EXPENSES

Keep proof, not guesses

Business expense treatment depends on the facts, substantiation and applicable tax rules.

Receipts & operating costs

- [ ] Supplies, consumables, and ordinary business purchases.
- [ ] Software, subscriptions, websites, payment and platform fees.
- [ ] Marketing, advertising, and professional service costs.
- [ ] Equipment, furniture, and technology purchases with dates and receipts.
- [ ] Rent, booth fees, coworking, or other business space charges.
- [ ] Business insurance and relevant license/permit fees.
- [ ] Contractor payments and related forms/records, when applicable.

Usage & special records

- [ ] Vehicle mileage log: date, business purpose, destination, business miles.
- [ ] Vehicle expense receipts and total miles, if relevant to method choice.
- [ ] Business phone/internet usage records and personal-use allocation.
- [ ] Travel, parking, tolls, and business meal receipts, if applicable.
- [ ] Home-office space and use records, only if you may qualify.
- [ ] Inventory/purchase records and cost of goods sold, if you sell products.
- [ ] Records of health insurance or retirement arrangements for review.

KEY RULE

A purchase is not automatically deductible because you made it for work. Some costs require allocation, capitalization, or specific eligibility. Keep receipts, dates, business purpose, and payment proof.

THIRD / MAKE YOUR TOTALS ADD UP

The 1099-K double-check

Payment app totals and income forms may describe some of the same payments.

01

Start with your sales records

Make a list of actual business payments received across cash, cards, apps, platforms and invoices.

02

Compare each 1099 to those payments

Match reported transactions to your own records. Do not automatically add every form together as separate income.

03

Identify adjustments and other transfers

Flag refunds, processing fees, chargebacks, duplicate reports and personal transfers with evidence.

04

Organize your expense proof

Keep income reconciliation separate from expense receipts so your preparer can review both sides.

EXAMPLE / ONE SALE, TWO REPORTS

A customer's $100 card payment may appear on your payment processor report and also in your bookkeeping. That is still one underlying sale. Keep records so you and your preparer can identify overlap accurately.

FOURTH / ONE LAST REVIEW

Ready to discuss your return?

These checks make a Schedule C conversation far more productive.

Business records: final check

- [ ] I can explain what work I did and when I started or stopped.
- [ ] My income summaries cover all cash, checks, cards, platforms, and apps.
- [ ] I reviewed my 1099s for missing, corrected, or duplicate information.
- [ ] I saved evidence of refunds, fees, transfers, and chargebacks.
- [ ] I have expense receipts and business-purpose records, including mileage if applicable.
- [ ] I tracked estimated tax payments and kept confirmations.
- [ ] I gathered W-2s and other nonbusiness income forms too.
- [ ] I will use a secure, approved process to share sensitive tax documents.

A QUICK NOTE ABOUT 2026

Depending on your situation, special deductions for qualifying tips, overtime, vehicle-loan interest or other items may require extra records. Ask about eligibility; these deductions are not automatic for every worker.

YOUR PRIVATE HANDOFF

Keep identifying numbers and bank details out of this printed sheet. Do not email completed tax records through a public signup form or ordinary social DM. Ask for your preparer's secure submission method.

D-XIRE Elite Tax prepares eligible individual returns, including supported sole-proprietor Schedule C situations; complex business-entity returns are outside this guide's scope.
